Guide to the CEDERBERG

BY DAVID BRISTOW. PHOTOGRAPHS BY TONY MAKIN

David Bristow and Tony Makin cannot wait to amaze and entertain you with images and stories about the background, backstories, and back road adventures of the Cederberg. Such as ... who was there first, what those strange paintings are about, why the rocks are all upside-down, some curious characters, and a very strange entrance portal.

RSVP to hpbookrsvp@gmail.com by 25 September to book your place. It is essential to RSVP for names to be listed for free entry at the gate.

The Cederberg has long been recognised as a place where world-weary city dwellers and adventure seekers can get away from it all. In Guide to the Cederberg, David Bristow provides essential background to the region and shares his ultimate Cederberg travel routes. The book presents the region's landmarks and highlights in a personal and carefully curated collection, gathered over a lifetime of nature tripping, hiking and mountain biking. A detailed introduction delves into the region's history, geology, fauna and flora, and includes tips on planning and packing for a trip.

David Bristow is a travel journalist, photographer, environmental scientist, storyteller and specialist tour guide. Over the past 40 years, he has explored Africa, mostly south of the equator, documenting and sharing his experiences. But it is the Cederberg that always beckons, and as an avid mountain biker, David is well acquainted with its back roads. A former editor of Getaway travel magazine, he has authored over 30 books on southern African natural history and cultural heritage.
